when the stars up in the sky when the lights along the street when the TVs in the mo-tel shine when the fingertips are fro-zen when the empty wind starts closing if they've got one they're all going, home we're just sitting here, all by myself you and me, nobody else but me sometimes shadows are the only light we see every night somebody's cryin' down the alley, on the cold, cold, ground someone's running, but they'll never, never, think there's a shadow underneath the trees someone running, someone no one needs sometimes darkness is the only light we see there's a shadow underneath the tree
