Walter: [Spoken]

This is Walter de Courcy reporting live for Global Television.

The opening match of the 1979 World Chess Championship is about to begin here in Merano, Italy. The title will go to the first man who wins six games. The players are the champion from the United States, Frederick "Freddie" Trumper, and the challenger from the Soviet Union Anatoly Sergievsky.

The political overtones of such a match between a Russian and an American have created a great deal of media attention from around the world.

And they're off.
