No distinction, no emotion for right or wrong
They tell me any choice will do
No color contrast in their dull morality
The shades of good and bad are through

Situational lies and situational hate
Situational adultery
They mix the black and white so casually
Their ethics seem so vague to me

And I'm black and white in a grey world
Black and white in a grey world
Black and white in a grey world

It's not so easy finding answers in the shade
It takes some patience, takes some grit
But it's better than throwing all you colors in the street
What's life without color in it?

And I'm black and white in a grey world
Black and white in a grey world
Black and white in a grey world

Ooh, I feel so out of place
Like I've landed on the moon
You can see it on my face
I don't mind being different
If I'm different for the truth

No color contrast in their dull morality
The shades of good and bad are through
No distinction for right or wrong
They tell me any choice will do

And I'm black and white in a grey world
Black and white in a grey world
Black and white in a grey world

Black and white
Black and white
Black and white
Black and white

Black and white
Black and white
Black and white
