This is a fair request, and I promise I will not judge any person only as a teenager.

You will constantly remind yourself that some of my generation judges people by their race, their belief, or the color of their skin, and that this is no more right than saying all teenagers are drunken dope-addicts or glue-sniffers.

You think its strange, that there's a way of how you looked, and how you act, and how you think pretend they're not the same as you.

Do you know about her strength in convictions or how she puts all her faith in religion. Did we take the time to really discover, how little we know about each other.

Keep us from saying anything.
Can't separate from everything.
And all this really means is you're one in a crowd
and you're paranoid of every sound.
You're not the friend
you won't miss anyhow.
