I struggle to reconcile these words of hope and freedom and these minister's convictions with these verbal mausoleums battle-scarred emancipations and holy carpe-diems the battles and bombshells i have levied on myself in the form of you in the form of you now, how can these all co-exist the heartbreak for the dying? when my tries turned to failure my sighs gave way to crying now just look at this destruction good and evil still are fighting leaving mangled half-hearts in their wake they take their toll on you in the form of me in the form of me well, i've been an agent of the death of love i've been an angel from above don't mind the way i feel, please save yourself and i've derailed your stability you've given that ability to me and i can say i've done it well but we've failed the final challenge love we're both so out of balance love let's commit this suicide and save us all.

well my heart will not forgive me for this unwilling extraction of your love from its controlling grips this unpardonable action will wage civil war between my heart and mind, the dueling factions never really got along too well i'll sell a heart that still belongs to you in the form of a tune

But even my own heart's eternal unforgiveness does not measure in capacity for hurt and in it's volume of displeasure to the guilt that i would feel
