Not always lost, but alone

Scattered by the tempest our fears kept spilled and were swept

Away as the surrogates of despair slept

Cradled in the deceitful hands of trust

Broken hearts compel, freedom to search

Behind the walls of the unseen garden

Stop crying, deny the subconscious

Its ability to ease the pain

And self consuming desperation

With prowess imperfection enters a lie

Raging storm a possibility

Penitent thoughts seek illegitimate pardons

Loneliness compares to nothing else

When inflicted by selfish separation

Not always lost, but seemingly alone

Unwilling hearts cannot be kept

Not always lost, but necessarily alone

Open eyes tracing every step

Not always lost, but desperately alone

It seems no matter when you lose yourself

You're always lost, so lost and blind

Direction can't regain sight in darkness

Is if nothing else a blindfolded walk on the bigoted scales of spite

Refusing to believe any more of misleading words and

Presumed truth relying on mistaken paths to take the sight

Out of my eyes granting my heart

Another chance to stand assured to a guided clear view

Not always lost, but seemingly alone

Unwilling hearts cannot be kept

Not always lost but necessarily alone

Open eyes tracing every step

Not always lost, but desperately alone
