Throw around your weight See how far it will get you
Making points with the players
In the game of names and who's fucked who

There is nothing superior, to those with angelic status When you're a puppet, with strings pulled by the facade

Confidence not arrogance
Arrogance, is something you can't learn
Confidence not arrogance
Arrogance, personality's trying to turn

Never will they know what it is like
The magnificence shining of a humble but confident soul

An empty room can be filled to the point of maximum capacity
By one person being overwhelmed in love with oneself

They protect themselves from any humbling return Building egotistical houses with delusional architecture

Confidence not arrogance
Arrogance is something you can't learn
Confidence not arrogance
Arrogance, personality's trying to turn

Never will they know what it is like
The magnificence shining of a humble but confident
soul

All noses in the clouds, pointing to the heavens
Gasping for identity and a breath of lasting recognition Talking down to everyone listening, stepping up, resisting Humility replies without answering in a silent return of mockery
