You can't convince me you're not in misery I think you love the attention it brings you have the answers to a million tiny stupid questions you have direction but your feet won't budge you're so in love you huddle around your're so in love you show around yourself while everyone is in hell you won't believe what is not your truth I can't tell because you've got that smirk there's something in that head of theirs it's not yours all those things you've said and done will never mean enough to someone it's not you - you think you're so different you haven't made a difference don't hold your head so high you won't see what's coming next
