It's not a solid, not a soft thing, to pull the wool up like a smoke screen

Nobody does it like a prophet, it's gone before you know you lost it

There are reasons you keep your hands tied, there's certain things you shouldn't have tried

So if you gotta tell me something, you better go from the beginning

We all forget to sleep, and crash at someone's feet
Everybody skips a beat

We let the chances pass, the few we held so fast
Everybody breaks a glass

And here I'm standing in the middle, not just a little but a hill full

Wondering how I got a head cold, wishing I didn't know what I know

It's never been about the money, we're worthy or we are not worthy

However much you got on your plate, you're as good as you reciprocate

We all pretend to keep our tongue out of our cheek Everyone's the fool they seek

We all go off the track, and feel for our way back
Everybody breaks a glass

Shook

scared to look at peers when they peer back

It's weird how we fear that It's weird how we wear masks

It appears that we fear our own tears

More than tear gas

My team's struggling in years past

Looking to draft beers

To bring cheers back

But when the drinking game's finished

No Guinness- just a clear glass

Seeing our real image mirrored back

The places that we go to cope

It's so strange
When we're older folks
It don't change
Trying to hang, we don't know the ropes
When we fall, we got more than our shoulders broke It's no game
It's why we overdose on cocaine
Get our brains comatose, there's no blame
If you've ever know shame
Known pain
Known days when it really don't feel ok

Somewhere perfection lies, but not for you and I Everybody trips some time
When cities fall like shacks, walls eventually crack
Everybody breaks a glass
