Chorus

I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again

I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again

A young girl sits against a tree, crying. She is ready to give up because she has no one in the world. Suddenly, a nest plummets from a nearby tree and thuds to the ground. The little girl notices that the mother and one of the chicks fly immediately towards the sky, but one chick remains; apparently one of her wings is broken.

Chorus

I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again

I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again

The little chick keeps flapping, attempting to fly, but keeps getting nowhere. The little bird simply won't give up. The little girl observes the baby bird making one last attempt and finally flies high to the sky. The little girl decides then and there, that she too, no matter how much flapping it takes, she will fly again.

Chorus

I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again

I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again
I will fly again

I will fly again
