I saw your photograph, a baby boy with ... afflictions
I saw your mother as she laid beside your crib I watched your father as he smiled and ... gazed upon you son
Only wished he had a better life to give Another day goes by that I don't hang my head and cry So shame on us as we all are waiting on Sorrow life is not tomorrow

Bow your head, beneath the wings of angels as they come to take your hurt away Bow your head, and all the world will take your hand
and pave,
A golden road for you

Take these words I say and put them ... underneath your pillow
And set your eyes upon, the crescent of the moon Listen to the songs that lullabies to soothe your restless nights
Sung by ancients olds, the guardians of your fight
While your inspiration makes me such a better man
Know my child that you will one day be free
Free from all they day that binds you

Bow your head, beneath the wings of angels as they
come to take your hurt away
Bow your head, and all the world will take your hand
and pave,
A golden road for you

[Guitar solo]

While your inspiration makes me such a better man
Know my child that you'll one day be free
Free from all they day that binds you

Bow your head, beneath the wings of angels as they
come to take your hurt away
Bow your head, and all the world will take your hand
and pave,

A golden road for you X 2
