Food on the table
got a brand new car you're willing -- and able to make a lifetime scar got two point two five daughters can't remember their middle names the days fly by like a long cold winter pretty soon they all look the same grey slacks, grey shirt, grey tie grey all around livin in a corporate shanty town life is like cable but you only watch CNN
if this sounds like a modern fable then it's time for the story to end flip around and find another station channel after channel -- boredom is rife when you hear the message crackle through

"i've never done a thing i've wanted in my life" [chorus]
when you're out doing whatcha gotta do wifey's at home yellin
"honey honey honey honey" and when you come home wifey is blue from screaming her demands for "money money money money" deep down it's time for a change but habits and love are hard things to break when the two are braided into one your vision is strange
so do you stick with what you know for sanity's sake?
[chorus]
