I always saw it deep inside your eyes
The way you act the way you said goodbye
Why don't you come out and say it?
Got home had a couple of beers
Had a shower washed away my tears
The sound of water took the world off my mind
You and me
me and you
Everything in its right place
Though the times, they were few
I won't forget the look on your face I hope it makes you feel better knowing that you're constantly running through his mind and I guess your self esteem is more important than him wasting all his fucking time Then one day when you're looking back you can think of the good ones and the games you played So have fun sleeping alone lying in the bed you made Look at myself look what I have become Compass is useless when you can't find direction from The feeling that you just need to forget
Why do things happen like they do?
Impossible to make sense of what you get Why can't I try to be a little optimistic but This all just made me so completely pessimistic
