She was late, he learned to stay awake and wait...
To make it trough the quiet nights, he learned to case
the morning light
When everything is brighter than the sun, she can't hide or run...
She can't change it, she can't take it back...

Please forgive me, and believe me...
Please don't throw it away...
Please forgive me, and believe me...
Please don't throw it away... Cause then I might stay...

She can not brake, a promise that she have never made
She's coming in to watch him drown, as the morning
floods a dried out town
Where everything gets brighter than the sun, there's nowhere left to run...
You leave your pride behind and find your way back...

Please forgive me, and believe me...
Please don't throw it away...
Please forgive me, and believe me...
Please don't throw it away... when I say

Little by little when we're ready to fall
Little by little when we open the doors
Little by little I'm ready to give myself...
... and be free...

Little by little... I say little by little...
