B. Payne, S. Murphy, F. Tackett, and P. Barrere

there's a place where the heart lives in a country all its own where love and redemption a distant mirage
delirious whispers tell of no concerns
a voiceless terriroty a stretch of endless frontiers marking time with the stone collected from the mountains connect us for the moment so simple and pure fallin'... fallin' through the worlds shufflin' slow motion
to an old car radio, under porcelain stars the future is waitin', the night time fadin' we were fallin' through the worlds your heart glides to me in a red velvet surrender we were dancin', seems like forever hold the world at bay caught a glimpse of a sunrise lookin' at the edge of time fallin'... fallin' through the worlds movin' in shadows to the shisper of a dance under porcelain stars a whirlwind rages these wind scattered pages are all that's left of our last chance never for a moment had I given up hope fallin'... fallin' through the worlds
I was waitin' for you, not a sould around I felt my luck run out that's when our time gave out a picture of sadness a picture of never the same never the same
