(Jimmy Dickens - Donald Trobridge)

It's the same old street in the same old town
The same old places where we hung around
The same old corner that I once lingered on
The whole world seems different to me since you're gone.

It's the same old crowd that we used to know
The same old Mary and the same old Joe
The same old places where we danced until dawn
The whole world seems different to me since you're gone.

Lonesome old house by the railroad track
That's me started wonder why I ever came back
The houses so dark and filled with gloom
Your faded old picture still hangs in my room.

Memories haunt me they go on and on
The whole world seems different to me since you're gone.

Lonesome old house by the railroad track
That's me started wonder why I ever came back
The houses so dark and filled with gloom
Your faded old picture still hangs in my room.

Memories haunt me they go on and on
The whole world seems different to me since you're gone...
