say
"you're right, step down. stop thinking out loud" stay up, too late- listening grey tips dipped in water tracing across her fingers chasing from lips to ears it's the half of this place to keep, conversation. that's just your game

let go when you know you're facing these conversations
they pour themselves out of prayer start spinning in circles

each voice is a tremble dipped in ink scripted. and still think the ink fell off your lips

conversations
stop me
speak without decision
