COUNT ME IN

WRITERS WAYNE NELSON, DAVID SCHEIBNER

When it's time for the final act to begin, call me, when you find your patience wearing too thin, there's a path that leads you straight to their door, I know if you believe, in time we'll even the score, I've walked that mile before. Yes, I'd like to join your fight, pull your ranks in tight and count me in, every move feels right tonight, darkness turns to light so count me in. Take your place, let them know you've arrived, go now, play your ace, show them how to survive, they held you back, nailed you down to the floor, slowly, you've got the brass ring, now you'll even the score, I've walked that mile before. Yes, I'd like to join your fight, pull your ranks in tight and count me in, every move feels right tonight, darkness turns to light so count me in. You're home free, you beat them at their own game, so now, they'll let you be but they know their loss is your gain, I've walked that mile before. Yes, I'd like to join your fight, pull your ranks in tight and count me in, every move feels right tonight, darkness turns to light so count me in, yes, I'd like to join your fight, pull your ranks in tight and count me in, every move feels right tonight, darkness turns to light so count me in.
