down

never fallin' down down down

never fallin' down.

even if i was blindsided by mac trucks in the side street in the alley way in the foriegn city

i would still make it back home

On a highway no bulletins no street signs, no other cars, no radio, no satellite

I still make it back home

Connected to the universe like a string of lights on the holiday if one's out doesn't mean the demise of all who roam the stone feel the earth y'all the fire water and sky under his home under his clothes under his belt its the varientsister?? tones i never regret the wake and the as the birth shot forth on my feet not my fins i am a man to finish it out don't forget gravity laws the only thing keeping me from flight wings of space

infinite night

downward spiral not in sight

never falling down down down

never falling down

great there is no father its her and her offspring nobodys offering help skin aint softening acts chopped to the ankles her babies coughing maybe the check will come today the waits exhausting she's the pillar so she cant be tilted

give her sons the feeling as though they got a million to blow need no stilts to reach the stars teach the kids to reach with their heads and they each will be yours i give a piece of me for her to have a piece of mind or a piece of your chicken cause its ramen all the time she's thin and getting scared but she never lets on many men will not fall cause their mama's head strong (strong strong strong)

pick your feet on up why don't you get on up lift your spirits up damn i know this shit is tough i flunked in high school my pops he left me young i often lost my cool days i feel my mama's gun i lost my only son when my girl she almost died a bad abortion haunted by a baby's eyes and every reason lies cause you know the truth inside you're feeling like a coward like the wrong person died but still you gotta ride let the years pass em by never really knowing why no questions why i'm always high down down down

we slipping and sliding 808 big riding servin' rocks balling while they conquering and dividing teeth glistening shining listening to ourselves lying believe in a bleedin' ego still trying identifying with the why and the whats self hatin is the scars and the cuts that run deep down not giving a fuck behind the sweet sound of the new blues rattling the truck full of sun roof to new shoes chrome neglecting the home disrespecting the zone that Sankofa should of shown us looking back before the time that they owned us but never really owned a damn thing the spirit sounded like

i'm hella irresponsible and possibly the cause of the my subsequent downfall now I take a pause and reflect on my karma and laws i've ignored all the signs that could cause a turn and redirect my preferred course of action before the curse of my ashes the rehabilitation of the baddest on the planet will set a mark a milestone of progress the life changing tones of my heart and soul mean the most learning voices be the search and exhume all the skeletons a room full of demons with an angel as a prisoner she's tortured for the visitors the listeners who read between the lines and stay inquisitive to dissect these sentences

last night i took a field trip kind of bent, hopped a fence cut across a playground and lay down in a cemetery reflecting on my past present and current events speech slurring out venting to the moon or course she was answering me not literal but in the spiritual sense we spoke me myself and i but i wasn't alone in fact it felt that picture of a beach with footprints in the sand you know the poem hanging in grandmamas home where does love come from?

where does it go when its gone what takes its place and why does that space turn hard as stone another year i am older today in many ways i've grown but in my head them questions still they roam riding a bike she said its like cycling in circles with your eyes closed no hands blind faith is what she called it man said life's an ocean with a lot of commotion once you dive, and ya its deep but if you could swim it ain't mattering

never falling down.
