I've got the lock on the low
I'm going back to New Mexico
Cold comfort and kerosene
Plain solitude

Guess I lost my touch
Those little things that used to mean so much seem so insignificant
In the cold, cold light

Well, how wrong can you be?
And how long must it take to see
That your world
Can spin fine, without me

Now, there's nothing more to say
It's alright
People change

Well, you can paint me blue
And I could lay the whole thing on you
Or hold on ala Hollywood
O'Neil and McGraw

But the trouble with me is that it took me so long to see
That the rain is pouring without you

And I've got nothing left to say
It's alright
People change

You can take my love
And bury it deep
And I'll take your love
And I'll bury it deep
I'll bury it deep

Well, how wrong can you be?
And how long must it take to see
That your world

Is turning, without me

Now, there's nothing more to say

It's alright

People change
