Ambition crumbles like the wintered Boston streets.
Another day of rain, an empty promise repeats.
Salt stained leather bound the soles of your feet.
Amongst good company, a drink to empathy.

Morning breaks and it's a brand new day.
Growing outward like a plant in the shade.

Hung over from the night, and my back isn't right
today. (isn't right today)
But the sun brings back a feeling like the end of a long work day.
Soil breaks, new life penetrates, and we move forward
