It's time to paint this college town
It's Friday night
We'll get all dressed up, ready to go
From bar to bar where
We can meet some
People that we don't know
And let them take us home

While you weren't around
She's left on the couch
With his roommates and no one there to hear her shout
She said "I think it's best if I just left"
But they held her down instead
She said "I think it's best if I just left"
But they held her down instead

She sits inside her room for days
Tells no one else about
That weekend that she spent away
The one that she won't soon forget
Cause being a victim scares her
They'll go free again

While you weren't around
With his roommates and no one there to hear her shout
She said "I think it's best if I just left"
But they held her down instead
She said "I think it's best if I just left"
But they held her down instead

While you weren't around
With his roommates and no one there to hear her shout

When I get my hands on you
I'll slit your throat with a dull knife
I'll put my hand on the wound
So you won't die to soon and
I'll put my knee on your chest
And squeeze out your final breath

I'll look deep in your eyes so
You know just who did this to you
I'll hang you in front of my house
So people passing by can
See your corpse and understand that
You got just what you deserve
