you find yourself pitched drained to a pit of whatever that crushes you usually theres someone up top with what looks like some rope it's not it's just for appearance they'd make it with twine but didn't have time too busy planning their outfits to prove them a hero they hold you down till they break your will everybody is taking pills there's all this pity we give out of sequence let's just have a party it's far more convenient all of the guests have arrived too early there's not enough sympathy to go around i should have had it catered the excuses are stocked the snacks aren't your fault and are certain regardless of what you want to eat take a dip in the pool the sorrows feel fine and besides they'll drown you eventually we'll all have some whine and feel conscious of time existentially and look down our noses at those we find simpler what are we supposed to do until then seriously
ugh
you put so much effort in forms pitch curves depths
and nobody notices and let yourself slip make a mess harm break and suddenly everyone's watching you it's not your fault it's just conditioning we all love a good wreck i know i'll have one... right now how are we supposed to arrive when everyone's already there? how are we supposed to survive if everyone's already dead
