Under a veiled and lucid moon bearing shades of crimson Oceans of blood wane through it It casts creeping shadows upon the frost ridden earth Amongst the worms
I arise from my sepulcher dreams of blood and flame elude me Again, the visions that came show light vanquished from the planes which I walk A maze is woven of dire despair and suffocating sorrow innocent death, unable to satiate desire to relinquish every impurity from my being I writhe in anticipation Once numb to an undying hunger with great haste hatred of divinity grew unbearable now for I am numb no longer

Death, the immortalizing winter, flew Long ago, this wraith dwelled inside me defiled by deceiving words that enslave you to him Soon to put to sleep my blackened spirit thirsts for thee Unleashing anger to transform my pain into pleasure Frozen eyes, no longer shed sullen tears an emptiness growing with every dream of darkly paradise churning clouds pour incessant storms over these barren lands desire overcomes me...
I invoke the darkness From invocation came sin where remorse was none a hell which pure spirits should not dwell
