

Adora "Skeleton"

History is seemingly repeating, my decisions all the same
Control is out of focus when your life moves frame by frame

Farewell, no one sees me now, I am traveling (try to escape)
Hand in hand with my skeleton 'cause I lost sight long ago

She marches on to her sad, sad song, the one that was never heard
Her grip on me is so strong, but she might let up with one word

Little did I know what would come of me after everything I'd built
I so eagerly sat back and drank your tall glass of overwhelming guilt

And then I screamed, "farewell,"
Go on take a bow while the empty chairs cheer you on
I'm still traveling with my skeleton, my bones lead me on
