You never know what you'll find until it's said and done, until the story's told It's not a mystery, we all know that some can leave us cold
You never wanted it to be this way but some things we can't choose
So you take what life's handed you and sometimes you lose Give it up, we're breaking down, you know we're all miserable
Have the guts to spell it out now

Find the words to say, find the guts to finally say that this doesn't work because it's not working
And know that it's okay, know that we will be okay
Maybe the happiest homes are divided ones

I don't want to pick a side so don't you ask me, don't you ask me
Where he goes and where she's been, I don't want to know
I know, I know it's difficult to let this go
But I need you to try because it's not my fight Let's start over

I know, I know it's difficult to let this go
But I need you to try because it's not my fight
Let's start over

So find the words to say, find the guts to finally say that this doesn't work because it's not working
And know that it's okay, know that we will be okay
Maybe the happiest homes are divided ones, yeah
Yeah

Just find the words to say, find the guts to finally say this doesn't work, it's not working Find the words to say, find the guts to finally say that this doesn't work because it's not working
And know that it's okay, know that we will be okay
Maybe the happiest homes are divided ones

But I need you to try because it's not my fight
Just start over
