I saw the writing on the wall,
Your lipstick reading please don't call
Your words and names in all,
Were screaming decadence,
I gave the best I had and more,
You left me lying on the floor,
And now I'm feeling down,
And even more depressed
And baby there is something you should know

I'm not running, I'm still here you left me far behind
I'm not running, I'm still here you left me far behind

I felt the tension in the room, but deep down I was on to you
And I'm not giving up or packing anything
And the awkward silence burned,
The tricks we played, the lies we learned,
I guess I'm sorry now, for giving you the creeps
And baby there is something you should know

I'm not running, I'm still here you left me far behind
I'm not running, I'm still here you left me far behind

Looking out of my window I can't feel you at all
Looking out of my window I can't feel you at all
Looking out of my window I can't feel you at all

I'm not running, I'm still here you left me far behind
I'm not running, I'm still here you left me far behind
