Stop, can we start again
And rewind the hands
'Cause they move too fast
I'd do it all again
Just to have you here
To relive the past
I don't know how long I can take
Watching you just walk away
From the truth that you have known
To a place you don't belong
In this new complacency
You're content to slip away
Now there's nothing I can do
But to say this prayer for you
High are the walls you build
I climb over them
But have I come too late
Choke on the things I said
If you swallow them
You may start to break
