It's characterized by manifestation of an inflammatory lymphogranulomatous reaction on the groin, caused by a virus which develops in a sub-acute way with peridontitis. Maceration of the tumescent ganglia will occur, followed by fistula, but total dissolution of the ganglion will not happen, so the fistula has no tendencies to disappear. It's preceded by ulcer on the genital organs such as granulomatous cancer. It's liable to complications, allowing stenotic rectitis happens, and maybe a variety of elephantiasis on the vulva. The diagnosis is got after a specific intradermal reaction. Aureomycin and a long treatment are necessary to eliminate the maceration.
