You're the element of surprise that none of us were prepared for The dead body behind the curtain that we couldn't help but stare towards This afternoon you were an only child and a friend to me
This evening you're not breathing you're just the seed of a memory

Memories of better days
Turn the pages back to a faded photograph of Memories of yesterdays
The years'll pass by but they'll never bring me back to you

They'll never bring me back to you Uh, never bring me back to you They'll never bring me back to Never bring me back, never bring me back to you

My memory remembers presently everything from that night
My senses always sensor any awful images or sights
But I didn't get to see through the eyes his poor mother did
I just ask why she had to be the one to discover him

Memories of better days
Turn the pages back to a faded photograph of
Memories of yesterdays
The years'll pass by but they'll never bring me back to Never bring me back to you, back to you, back to you

All I ask is a better day
A better way to carry the weight of you I sing this song to remember the days
When I wasn't afraid to carry the weight of you

To the friend that I love who has different roots of blood
We are the earth that makes mud
That comes from rain that made the flood

We cycle in and out of what our lives are capable of And through it all I thank you for teaching me below and above

Memories of better days
Turn the pages back to a faded photograph of
Memories of yesterdays
The years'll pass by but they'll never bring me back to

Memories of better days
Turn the pages back to a faded photograph of
Memories of yesterdays
The years'll pass by but they'll never bring me back to Never bring me back to you

I had a friend who was way too young to die I guess death is one of those things some people do to life
