I heard the old man say we need the rain and I can feel it in my bones, they're aching I'll watch the sky and wait and wish these waters ease my pain because my well is breaking if you'd get next to me and help me find simplicity then you could be the one to take me, to break me and flood my soul
could you be the one to release me?
oh, release me
waiting for your love
oh, to free me
so, release me
grey clouds they infiltrate as every move you make gets me closer to clarity while droplet drummers lead a complex beat increase in speed somehow accompanies our intensities at first this cloud burst is pulling us under lightning and thunder rain falls and you take me under

so, release me

so take off your shoes and stay awhile this might be the right time tonight if it makes you feel good then it makes me feel alright we should take down the curtains now and make blankets here on the floor torrential downpour

a potential for more let's cease to fight this tension that ignites us here in the dark cause tension causes friction and this friction leads to sparks the rain has filled this cup and before it overflows

I wanna take you in now here it goes

we have just begun

you release me
