I took a bath put on your robe
I read your magazines
I used your phone

Looked through your photographs and drank your wine Moved all your stuff over made room for mine

Took a handful of change from your jar
I'm gonna need it when I drive your car

But I won't question your good intentions
I don't intend to ask you any more questions

I hope you sleep good tonight

I come home
the kitchen's clean I love your movies and your great big screen I fell asleep in your favorite chair Then I walked around a while in my underwear

At 3 am I turned on all your lights and I snuck into your bedroom in the middle of the night Returning from a party with your high class friends And writing all about it with your forty-dollar pen

But I won't question your good intentions
I was only a breath away

I was at the bottom

Take me to the top Got yourself a little disaster

I don't mind at all
You can listen through the wall
I know what you're actually after
