"Miss Her So"

I've worn out the sunset
I've worn out the night
I've worn out the daybreak
I've worn them all out
I've worn out my welcome
And I really don't care
'Cause I've worn out my patience
And not I'm just a little worse for wear

All because I miss her so
I miss her so
I can't seem to let her go

Sunday morning sky is blue
And I'm still in black
Nowhere is where I'll be
If she won't have be back
She wears a nightgown
On the other side of town
And all I've done is let her down
Wearing myself into the ground

All because I miss her so
I miss her so
I can't seem to let this go

And everybody knows it
Not everybody blows it quite like me

I miss her so
I can't seem to let this go
