You crash out on his side
All is quiet, all is calm
The air thick with stale smoke
Your cheap perfume and alcohol

And although you know, you need him
Like a stake through your heart
You think it's worse to stay apart

'Cause it's the last day of summer
And it will hurt you more than most
'Cause you're still trying to mine
For memories in a ghost

It's the last day of summer
And you know you're not supposed
But you're still trying to mine
For memories in a ghost

You're absence makes no sense
Just a constant state of suspense
And although you both know
The bubble might burst as soon as you meet

Another false start
Rather than to stay apart

'Cause it's the last day of summer
And it will hurt you more than most
'Cause you're still trying to mine
For memories in a ghost

It's the last day of summer
And you know you're not supposed
But you're still trying to mine
For memories in a ghost
