You lay your head on my shoulder
I wish you'd come a little closer now
But somehow this is all too real
This town seems so old to me Maybe someday I'll finally see
That this whole life is so much more than this

And hopefully in three years
I'll finally figured out what this world is for I'll be on my own way out Be able to travel towards The beach and those sunny days I promise that I'll be okay
But I'll miss where I used to live on Maiden Lane

I'll miss old friends and my family
They always meant so much you see
Especially my parents, and how they care for me
I'll be singing the whole way, while I drive to the east coast bay
I can't wait to get there, that's where my heart will stay

For me to be waiting for, waiting for
To see what my God has in store for me, for me
I know that he's got me now, he's got me now
While you all sing along he will seem so proud
