"Hell And Bliss"

To explain the madness of you,
To complain of the sadness involved with knowing you,
To forget the revolting thought of going through.
The regret and the healing that I'd have to do.

Chorus:

Through my eyes the sky is pretty,
And you promise you'll join in the flight.
But I can't deny the gritty thought,
That you can't take the height,
You can look at this as one big fall,
Life will be both hell and bliss,
Or it can be nothing at all,
So I just ask you now to choose,
Don't you think it's worth it
Even if you lose?

How can I begin to speak,
When actions measure true feeling,
Though your words do leave me weak,
Your movements always leave me kneeling.
The true test of time is distance
But I am not willing to see,

I won't damage with nonsense,
What actions show is meant to be,

Chorus:

Through my eyes the sky is pretty,
And you promise you'll join in the flight.
But I can't deny the gritty thought,
That you can't take the high,
You can look at this as one big fall,
Life will be both hell and bliss,
Or it can be nothing at all,
So I just ask you now to choose,
Don't you think it's worth it
Even if you could still lose?
