

Makeshift Lullaby

"The Monster, The Hero, And The Victim"

Visit "The Monster, The Hero, And The Victim" on MotoLyrics.com

Porcelain teeth, cherry flavored lipgloss,
Surround a mouth fighting to hide what it truly wishes
to reveal.

When every day becomes a battle,
And every breath holds dear,
When does it become to draw the line?

Stay quiet now, you may wake the monster
And foil the plans we've fought so hard to keep.
There's a whole new world left for us to see,
So let's make our escape, now, while he sleeps.

Porcelain teeth, cherry flavored lipgloss
Surround a mouth fearing to tell a soul
What it truly means to feel pain.
When every day becomes a battle,
And every breath could be your last,
When does it become time to say goodbye?

Stay quiet now, you may wake the monster
And foil the plans we've fought so hard to keep.
There's a whole new world left for us to see,
So let's make our escape, now, while he sleeps.

Running mascara, the tears smear hope
Over the victim's lucid eyes,
Fighting every moment to stay awake.
She heaves, expelling the liquid remedies
She's consumed to take her pain away.

Stay quiet now, you may wake the monster
And foil the plans we've fought so hard to keep.
There's a whole new world left for us to see,
So let's make our escape, now, while he sleeps.

Visit Makeshift Lullaby page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.