only time will tell if I'll allow the scenery around to eat me alive

I want to sleep for weeks like a dog at her feet even though I know it won't work out in the long run so I burn down the wall, breathe my good shadow those arms I once knew, hold me like gold I learn how to speak a forgotten language I fall in the sea but forget how to swim

When anything that's anything becomes nothing that's everything
and nothing is the only thing you ever seem to have but only time will tell if I'll allow

the scenery around to eat me alive

I want to sleep for weeks like a dog at her feet
even though I know it won't work out in the long run so I burn down the bone, breathe my good shadow those arms I once knew, hold me like gold I learn how to speak a defeated language I fall in the street as I howl at the moon

When anything that's anything becomes nothing that's
everything
