I'll hang on to these last words
The ones you whisper in my ear
Before you pull yourself away from here
(C'mon!)

For the last time
I'll convince the sun will never rise again

And it's likely that you'll find me
Before long crawling up your driveway
Begging you for attention
I don't care if you come outside
Just please pick up your phone
And tell me, that there's someone out there for me
And one day, I'll be in love for real

But I would tell you that you're wrong
I've already found her and she's held up in her room
Building for a song (?)
This driveway is starting to feel like home

And I'll sleep outside your house
And wait for you to come out
And in the morning I'll kiss you,
And tell you I miss you
This has to be figured out

My nerves are shot right now
I wish that I was too, but I'm not.

All I have is you.

Till the morning light,
I lie awake because I need you by my side,
To know if I will make it
Till the morning light
I lie awake because I need you by my side,
To know if I,

You've given me no faith in what tomorrow might bring
If there was a place on your love, I'd sell everything

And it hurts so bad to know that you're okay, through it all

Till the morning light,
I lie awake because I need you by my side,
To know if I will make it
Till the morning light
I lie awake because I need you by my side,
To know if I,

Till the morning light,
I lie awake because I need you by my side,
To know if I will make it
Till the morning light
I lie awake because I need you by my side,
To know if I will make it,
