She was kissing somebody who wasn't her boyfriend she met him at a bar, he was a hot Australian she didn't mean to do it but she liked his accent and somehow I'm responsible then her friend decided to go home with one of his friends they spent the night at his place in the north of Florence all she really wanted was to fuck his accent
and somehow I'm responsible I've only known you for a month shouldn't have taken so long to realize that you suck I hope you're getting what you want cheating on your boyfriend and acting like a slut one's in the corner and the other is laughing I'm sitting at the bar wondering if I should take action they told me what they wanted but this wasn't an accident and why am I responsible that's it, I'm leaving it ain't worth it for free beer there's way too many reasons I shouldn't be here then one follows me out, and I can see she's in tears why am I responsible?
well shame on you, and shame on me shame on your favorite Aussie and I don't know just how this happened but I'll blame you, and you'll blame me and then we'll blame society and I don't care if we're never really ever friends again I walk her home and tell her not to worry I'm not a saint and I've been there myself but you gotta tell him or it will eat you empty you're not protecting him, you're protecting yourself ah hell, you blew it kid, it's already done so go ahead and do whatever you want cause no matter what you do, it'll always feel wrong and if it don't feel any different then be pretty sure that there was nothing there all along
