as I sit here all quiet wonder why we're apart and the noise from the city cuts a whole through the dark as the nighttime is falling and the day flies away can you hear me I'm calling can you hear me I say that I would cross every river I would sail every sea

I would climb every mountain if it could bring you back to me
I would part every ocean
I would catch every star
I would cross every river to be right where you are baby lower your shoulder and relax for a while you've been running for ages you have run all your life but you know there will always be a part of you here so wherever life takes you you will always be near and I would cross every river

I would sail every sea
if it could bring you back to me
I would part every ocean
I would catch every star

many things I should have done many miles I should have run many fights I should have won and if the stars fall down tonight and all is lost no hope in sight I'll think of you I'm alright and I would cross evry river

I would sail every sea
if it could bring you back to me
I would part evry ocean
I would catch every star
