

Marillion

"An Accidental Man"

Visit "An Accidental Man" on MotoLyrics.com

I was taught from much too young
To never give myself away
Yes, I was taught for every secret
There's a price you have to pay

An accident of gender
An accident of birth
That holds me to this point of view
This time and place on earth
This time and place on earth

You ask me how I'm feeling
But I only wish you knew
How hard it is for me to share?
Share those kind of things with you

It's not that I don't love you
It's just I can't connect
?Cause I was taught from much too young
To shine and not reflect

I'm an accidental man
I'm an accidental man
I'm an accidental man

You ask me if I'm happy
I only wish I knew
?Cause happiness is not something
That I ever learned to do

It's not that I'm complaining
It's all the same to me
If everything that happens, happens
Accidentally

I'm an accidental man
I'm an accidental man
I'm an accidental man
I'm an accidental man

I was taught for every secret
There's a price you have to pay

I was thought from much too young
To never give myself away

I was born to worthy causes
I was born to take the reins
I was taught from much too young
To never give myself away

An accident of gender
An accident of birth
That holds me to this point of view
This time and place on earth
This time and place on earth

An accident of gender
An accident of birth
That holds me to this point of view
This time and place on earth
This time and place on earth

So try and understand if
I don't say all I can
A stranger to myself, I am
A stranger to myself, I am
A stranger to myself, I am

I'm an accidental man
I was thought from much too young
I'm an accidental man
[Incomprehensible]

Visit Marillion page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.