Himself As A Child

Himself as a child he's holding hands with Over the same places life will take them tonight They'll be passing again by the houses of memory
by empty seas, by the nets of fear
They'll be passing again by the houses of memory
by empty seas, by the nets of fear

They'll stand together and see passing by like rivers the moments that never grow old and the faces that have turned themselves into streets and centuries and the dreams that have dug through the years hideouts

when I was a child
I had discovered a garden
So I could hide myself there whenever I'm absent from life
when I was a child
I had hidden a sun
So that my way could have light
And my silence (could have) a friend
and my silence a friend

Himself as a child from the hand will take Like a glass for one instant he'll crack, he'll break
They'll then separate and each one will go
To a world cut in half where both don't fit
They'll then separate and each one will go
To a world cut in half where both don't fit

when I was a child I had discovered a garden So I could hide myself there whenever I'm absent from life when I was a child I had hidden a sun
So that my way could have light
And my silence a friend
And my silence a friend
