he was haggard and gray, and he walked with a limp he'd have him a smoke, and he'd take him a sip born in the summer of twenty-four, son of a veteran of the first world war

he entered the service in forty-one, and he didn't come home till the fighting was done wearing a silver star on his chest, damn proud to say he was one of the best

twenty-one guns, the stars, the stripes
an eye full of tears, and a heart full of pride when you hear that distant bugle play another old soldier fades away
another old soldier fades away

he took a bullet in the hip, outside in Nam. he was back in the field by fifty-one said Douglass Macarthur, was a man among men and Harry s. Truman, was a horses end still he never questioned, his uncle Sam when they sent him in, to Vietnam they brought him home in seventy-three on a hundred percent, disability

an eye full of tears, and a heart full of pride
another old soldier fades away

he loved this country, with all of his might right up until the day he died in a crowded ward at the local V.A.

an eye full of tears, and a heart full of pride
