When I gave my heart to a tinker boy
he said a fish could love a swallow
And I will go with my travelling man Wherever he goes I will follow.

He will mend
your pots and pans
Your kitchen knives he'll take and sharpen Then I'll be gone with my travelling man and never more your doorway darkne.

The fish and the bird who fall in love will find no place to build a home in.
The fish and the bird who fall in love are bound forever to go roaming.
