Further down the road there's a promise
Standing in the wind and rain Waiting for the birds of spring Empty pockets are a part of love

Reach out for tomorrow
Life can be you and me

I won't ever deceive you babe
Put a light in the window
And I'll call your name I'll be yours always I'll be yours

All the seeds of chance are in the wind now Taken from their waking dreams Tossed and turned for us to see Summers on your side when winter fades

NÅ¥ mÅ¥ lille Anna sove
Sove godt I senga si
NÅ¥ mÅ¥ lille Anna sove
Sove godt i senga si

[Spoken Word]

We drove down to Beresford South Dakota.
My Mom and Dad in the front, two sisters and I in the back.
My Aunt Margaret lived there all by herself.
My Dad would start to drive real fast and we would open the windows and spill grape soda on ourselves.
There were town parks we would stop at with bandstands,
no one else walking around under the trees just us;
alone we'd stop there for a while.
Just being there with the family then,
there wasn't any time to make decisions, there wasn't any time at all and isn't that what we want for ourselves, a place to live, some work to do and our loved ones to be with.
