at a diner down on broadway they make small talk when she brings his eggs and fills his coffee cup he jokes about his love life tells her he's 'bout ready to give up that's when she says i've been there before keep on lookin'
cause maybe what you're lookin for is...

chorus:

somebody in the next car some body on the mornin train somebody in the coffee shop that you walk right by everyday somebody that you look at but never really see somewhere out there
there's somebody

across town in a crowded elevator he can't forget the things that waitress said he usually reads the paper but to day he reads a strangers face instead it's that blue eyed girl from two floors up maybe she's the one maybe he could fall in love with

chorus:

somebody on the morning train
that you walk by everyday

now they laugh at the moment that it happened a moment they both missed until that day when he saw his future in his eyes instead of another friendly face and he wonders why

it took so long when she was always there at that diner waiting on

chorus:

yeah.....somewhere out there, there's somebody.....
