You meet again.
You fall again.
Reminded of why you never did let go.

You make the call
and you talk and talk and talk.
You meet once more
and you've never been more sure.

And as the two of you climb the stairs to the roof
to sit and watch the setting sun.
You take her hand but cannot understand that the end has just begun.

In her eyes were eternity in a moment.
No disguise, as she almost made it through to you.

You can't say you don't know
why you can't let it go.
But you want her to know you still care.
You see her everywhere.

A park in town -
she's there with you.
A summer kiss and it's like a dream come true.

And as you climb those stairs going higher it's soon getting harder the further you go.
And when the storm won't settle inside you hide
as before where the wind don't blow.

In her eyes were eternity in a moment.
No disguise, as she almost made it through to you.

You can't say you don't know
why you can't let it go.
But you want her to know you still care.
You see her everywhere.

You can't say you don't know
why you can't let it go.

But you want her to know she's still there.

Welded into your heart
like she was from the start.
Not one day passes by when you don't regret that you're apart.
