

Marshall Tucker Band"I Should Have Never Started Lovin' You"

Visit "I Should Have Never Started Lovin' You" on MotoLyrics.com

There's something in your eyes that remind me
Of all the loves I've left behind me
Looks on your face yes they tell me
That I should have never started loving you

It was true when they said that I was mean and cruel
All the loves I've had I've made them out as fools
Now the tide has turned and I'm lonely too
I should have never started loving you

I should have never started loving you
After all the things that we've been through
I could have spent my whole life with you
I should have never started loving you

You hugged me in a way that I had never felt
Sky turned so dark I thought I knew you well
I'm so lonely girl with I could leave this world
I should have never started loving you

I should have never started loving you
After all the things that we've been through
I could have spent my whole life with you
I should have never started loving you

[Solo]

It was true when they said that I was mean and cruel
All the loves I've had I've made them out as fools
Now the tide has turned and I'm lonely too
I should have never started loving you

I should have never started loving you
After all the things that we've been through
I could have spent my whole life with you
I should have never started loving you
I should have never started loving you
I should have never started loving you
I should have never started loving you

