In the morning Satrapold calls Blether, the head groom of the castle's stables, and tells him to saddle up a new horse. The same day the two of them are going to go to Spiritus' inn., the occultist' nest; they do so in disguise so that nobody will recognize them. (This is a new technique of espionage.) Satrapold is shocked by Calamaria's presence in the public house, where she serves spirits. With the wave magic wand the Captain's consciousness vanishes and his body and soul are flooded with an emotion completely opposed to the desire to obliterate spiritism in the Krkonose slopes.
